

Editor's Top Five Stories for 2023

Written by By Molly Ann Howell Managing Editor
Friday, 05 January 2024 06:10

---

Editor's Top Five Stories for 2023

Written by By Molly Ann Howell Managing Editor
Friday, 05 January 2024 06:10

---

Elmer McKinley, a Navajo man, was the first to be killed in the winter of 1886. He was killed by a group of soldiers who were hunting for him. McKinley was a prominent figure in the Navajo community and was known for his leadership. The soldiers were looking for him because he was a leader of the Navajo people who were resisting the government's efforts to force them to move to a reservation. McKinley was killed in a battle with the soldiers. His death was a significant event in the history of the Navajo people and the United States. The soldiers were looking for him because he was a leader of the Navajo people who were resisting the government's efforts to force them to move to a reservation. McKinley was killed in a battle with the soldiers. His death was a significant event in the history of the Navajo people and the United States.