Gallup Police Department Lt. Rosanne Morrisette said the man found west of King Dragon restaurant early Monday evening has been identified as Fredlin Allison, 30, of Rock Springs, N.M.

Morrisette said a Community Service Aide worker recognized the deceased man from taking him to the Na'nizhoozhi Center Inc-Gallup Detox Center. When a name was secured, an identification was made via the state's Motor Vehicles Division. From there, police contacted family members who were able to identify Allison based on appearance descriptions.

"They identified him through the rings he was wearing and other descriptors," Morrisette said.

"It doesn't look like there was any foul play," she said, adding that the body of Allison was sent to Albuquerque for an autopsy and toxicology testing.

Allison's death is the tenth open area death of the 2015/16 Winter/cold season. Community Service Aides' pick up inebriated folks and take them to the local detox center.
