ZUNI, N.M. – The Journey of Hope South team arrived in Zuni, N.M. this past week.

This overnight stop comes after a 105-mile ride from Lakeside, Arizona, and is the 15th day of a 3,745-mile cycling event from Long Beach, California to Washington, D.C. This group of 28 cyclists and seven crew members is one of three Journey of Hope teams that will directly enhance the lives of thousands of people with disabilities through grant funding and community engagement.

Although there is not one scheduled in Zuni, the team frequently stops at local community sponsors for Friendship Visits. At Friendship Visits, the cyclists will connect with the people they are riding to support as a way of breaking barriers and highlighting the abilities of all people.

These Friendship Visits often include activities like dance offs, games and sports. The team will be staying at St. Anthony Church, who has been providing lodging and serving as a community sponsor for the Journey of Hope since 2015.

The Journey of Hope team consists of Pi Kappa Phi fraternity men from across the country. The
