Joe was transported to the GPD for a breath test and gave one good sample with a result of 0.26, more than three times the legal limit. Joe was then transported to MCDC for booking.

Gonzales followed at a safe distance from Patton Drive to Highway 66 East until the suspect pulled into the parking lot of the Busy Bee Laundromat.

When the driver, later identified as Yazzie, got out of the car, he had some trouble walking, was slurring his words, and had red, bloodshot eyes. His story was that he had been in an argument with his girlfriend but insisted he had only had one can of beer but was stoned.

Another GPD Officer retrieved his girlfriend from the Pinon Hills apartments and she gave a slightly different statement. She said that Yazzie had consumed four cans of Four Loco beer and about five shots of Fire Ball whiskey. Yazzie failed the field sobriety test but when given a breath test of the GPD, blew twin marks of 0.23 on the IR 8000.

Yazzie was then booked and processed into the MCDL.

Flicking your headlights off and on while you're stopped at a green light is not usually a good idea, especially if it happens right after the bars close.

GPD Officer Andrew Thayer noticed Saunders doing this very thing and his cop senses were alerted almost immediately. Turning on his emergency lights, the suspect pulled into the parking lot of Nizhoni Trading, through a dirt lot at the rear of the store, and then over a sidewalk and curb, and finally into the parking lot of Goodfellas.
