GPD Patrolman Adrian Quetawki said he spoke to a woman at her residence on Sandstone Street at about 8 pm Dec. 25. She said her boyfriend was about to leave and was warming up his car when a white vehicle pulled up behind it and a man from the vehicle jumped out, ran to her boyfriend's truck and got into the driver's seat.

The woman said her boyfriend ran to his truck and began to pull the man out when another man from the white car hit him over the head with a pole. Both men then got into the pickup and began driving away.

The woman said she then saw her boyfriend jump into the bed of the truck as it sped off, followed by the white vehicle. She said she tried to call her boyfriend but he did not answer.

As she was finishing her report, Quetawki said he received word from Metro Dispatch that the boyfriend had called and said he was at the White Cliffs Mobile Home Park. Quetawki said when he arrived at the trailer park, the boyfriend had a towel wrapped around his head.

The boyfriend said when he jumped into the bed of the pickup, the two men inside continued to drive away. When they got on Highway 66, they began to drive and stop very hard in an effort to get him to fall out of the truck.

When that failed, the two in the truck kept going and turned onto County Road 5 before stopping.

The two men got out of the pickup as their other vehicle came up and stopped. The boyfriend said a man got out of that vehicle with a gun in his waistband.

The three men told him to get out of the truck or they would kill him. He said he got out of the truck and the two vehicles sped away on County Road 5. He said he then walked to the trailer park until he found someone who would let him in to call the police.

12/23, Gallup

A Thoreau woman and a Mentmore man reported being assaulted Dec. 23.

When GPD Patrolman Justin Foster arrived at the scene, a parking lot at 502 Dani Dr., he met with a man and a woman.

The man said he was standing outside when another man came up to him and began punching him in the face. He said he tried to defend himself but the man kept hitting him. He said his sister saw him being hit and tried to pull the man off him.

The woman told Foster the man started hitting her and she fell to the ground. The man then left the area.

Foster reported that the two were extremely intoxicated. He said he noticed the woman had several bruises on her and she was later transported to a Gallup hospital for treatment.

Foster said the two kept changing their accounts of how many people were in the group that attacked the brother. At first, it was two males and one female, and then it was only one male and a female, so Foster said he was uncertain what really happened.

The woman said she didn't want to press charges, so Foster said he would only make a report.
