The car matched the description of a vehicle that had been involved in a hit and run accident earlier in the day. He ran the license plate and it came up as being suspended.

When he stopped the vehicle, he talked to James, 35, of Albuquerque, who told him the car had been damaged a while back. Kleeberger said James showed signs of being intoxicated so he asked him to take the standard field sobriety tests.

He agreed but failed the tests and was arrested for DWI. He then agreed to take a breath alcohol test and posted two samples of .18.
