When Clark asked him why he was beaten, Long said he wasn't sure, but he thought it might be because he cheated on his ex-girlfriend and her sister got mad.

Long said they'd been in a white sportscar, but he didn't know the make or model.

Medstar arrived and checked Long over. He had a small cut on his left eyebrow. In his report Clark said Long was highly intoxicated and he couldn't stand on his own. Clark reported his breath smelled like alcohol.

Medstar took Long to the Gallup Indian Medical Center for treatment.

Clark went into Deadhorse Speedway to speak to employees to find out if they had seen the fight, but no one had. They said Long had come in asking for help.

Clark checked Long's criminal record with the Metro Dispatch, but there was no information about him.

On April 19 at 7:59 pm Deputy Timo Molina was dispatched to 501 Crystal Avenue in Gamerco because a female caller had said a woman was on her property in violation of a protection order.

According to the report he filed with the McKinley County Sheriff's Office, Molina arrived on the scene and spoke with the female caller from Gamerco. She explained that a woman named Kimberly Johnson had been on her porch knocking on her front door.

The victim said Johnson had been served with an order of protection by McKinley County Sheriff's Deputy Nocona Clark. The victim said Johnson had left before Molina had gotten there, but that she might be hiding in the area. She said Johnson had been heading northbound, but when Molina checked the surrounding area he couldn't find anyone.

The caller said that Johnson didn't have an address outside of 501 Crystal Avenue, and that she was someone who stayed on the "streets."

In his report Molina said he couldn't issue Johnson a criminal summons because she lacks a valid mailing address.

But that all changed the next morning when Molina was dispatched to the address again at about 1:30 am. He met Johnson outside the house, and after he verified the order of protection he arrested Johnson and she was booked at the county jail.

Johnson was released on her own recognizance.
