Troncoso conducted a traffic stop near the intersection of Highway 118 and Third Street.

The driver and rear passenger windows opened as he approached and he noted a strong smell of alcohol coming from inside. He met the driver, Sakizzie, 58, who handed him a regular ID instead of a driver's license. She said she was coming from Love's and had previously consumed a six-pack of Coors Light.

Sakizzie got out of the vehicle at Troncoso's request, where he also noticed she had bloodshot eyes and slurred speech. She agreed to take the standard field sobriety tests, failed, and was placed under arrest. Troncoso searched the vehicle and found several cans of Coors Light inside. There were also an unspecified number of passengers in the vehicle, who were all transported from the scene by a tow truck driver.

After agreeing to give a breath sample, Sakizzie was transported to the local state police office for the test, where she posted two samples of .12. She was then taken to the McKinley County Adult Detention Center and booked without incident.
