not turn off the vehicle. The female passenger left the car.

The witness said the driver hit the car wash building several times, then managed to get the car unstuck and left. The caller followed him until officers made contact.

Largo investigated the incident and stated in his report that the car had hit a yellow concrete pole at the last bay of the carwash.

Gallup Officer Clarissa Morgan who was also dispatched to the site spotted a car matching the description of the suspect vehicle turning into the nearby Wendy's parking lot.

Morgan activated her unit's emergency lights and conducted a traffic stop. The driver, identified as Geno Antonio, 33, of Rock Springs, N.M., did not appear to be wearing his seatbelt and seemed confused when responding to Morgan's questions.

Antonio agreed to take the standard field sobriety tests when Morgan asked, but performed poorly and was placed under arrest.

Officer Patrick Largo verified the damage at the scene. Morgan transported Antonio to Gallup Police Department for the breath test, where he posted samples of .32, .29, and .30. Antonio was then transported to McKinley County Adult Detention Center and booked on charges of Aggravated DWI, consumption or possession of an alcoholic beverage in an open container in a motor vehicle, suspended or revoked driver's license, lack of insurance, failure to notify about an accident, failure to wear a seat belt.

He was released on his own recognizance.

A small black Jeep that ran into a fire hydrant near East Buena Vista Drive and Ford Drive and then left the scene brought out Gallup Police Officer Elijah Bowman. A caller stated the vehicle might still be in the area.

Bowman checked several vehicles before he found the Jeep. It had exited the parking lot at Ford Canyon to the nearby upper field lot where it ran into the curb and stopped. The driver, identified as Bridgette Etsitty, 23, of Gallup, got out of the vehicle.

Etsitty told Bowman she was fine and had just been arguing with her partner. Then her girlfriend approached and she raised her voice. As he spoke with Etsitty, Bowman noted that she smelled of alcohol and had bloodshot eyes. She told him she had a shot of 99 Bananas and an unspecified alcoholic drink prior to driving.

She agreed to take the standard field sobriety tests, but failed them. Bowman transported Etsitty to Gallup Police Department after she agreed to take the breath test. She posted two samples of .21 and was then transported to McKinley County Adult Detention Center and booked on aggravated DWI and driving without a license.

She was released on a $1000 cash bond.

She told Gallup Police officer Michael Eley that she and two friends, one of them pregnant, were in her car when a white Ford F-150 drove up next to them and called out, "Hey, Baby. Where you girls going?"

Then the truck drove around her car, hit it and damaged the passenger side.

She followed the truck to get the license plate number and report it. She said it made a fast turn westbound onto Park Avenue and struck a guard rail, which disabled it.

Eley spoke with the driver of the truck, Tristin Tsosie, 23, of Gallup.

Tsosie had no visible signs of being impaired, but performed poorly on two of the standard field sobriety tests. Eley placed Tsosie under arrest.

Tsosie admitted to drinking two beers earlier that evening and was transported to Gallup Police Department for the breath test. He posted samples of .12 and .11. Eley transported him to McKinley County Adult Detention Center, where he was booked on DWI, careless driving, and failure to give information and render aid at the scene of an accident.

He was released on his own recognizance.
