NAPPY TIME

3/19, GALLUP

Adrian Niiha crashed out in the back of someone else's vehicle and was arrested for "unlawful taking of a vehicle," according to Gallup Police Department Officer Jessie Diaz's report. Niiha, 24, refused to open the car door for officers, so they had to utilize a "lockout kit tool" to open the vehicle. Diaz noted that there were cans of "Four Loko" and "Mickey's" in the middle cup holders. So, he was also charged with "consume/possession of alcohol in a motor vehicle."

TRUCK DRIVER FOUND DEAD

3/19, JAMESTOWN

Joseph Hunter of Springfield, MO, was found deceased in his big rig at the Pilot Travel Center. MCSO Deputy Salina Brown responded to scene at about 8:30 am. An employee found him unresponsive. According to Brown's report, Hunter's stepfather said the only medical condition he knew that his son had was sleep apnea. Hunter was 38.

FLASHLIGHT ASSAULT

3/17, GALLUP

Mika Notah, 18, reportedly threw a flashlight at an employee's face during intake at NCI Gallup Detox Center. The flashlight hit the employee's chin and chest, according to GPD Officer Dominic Molina's report. Notah pulled his wrist away from Molina as he tried to cuff him, and based on the report he was angry and used some choice language not fit for print. Notah was charged with battery and resisting, evading or obstructing an officer.

SPIT ASSAULT

3/17, THOREAU

McKinley County Sheriff's Deputy Garrylle James responded to call from a woman who said her nephew Alex Beyale, 29, was being belligerent and she wanted him out of the house. He and a woman were asleep in the back room, according to the deputy's report. He woke them up and offered to take them elsewhere.

Both complied, but James soon discovered that Beyale had a bench warrant in Sandoval County. The woman was dropped off and James asked Beyale to get out of the car so he can place him in handcuffs. This is when Beyale's reported belligerent side came out. He spat on the deputy and was arrested for battery on a peace officer.
